DCRC GLOBALENSE A JOURNAL OF SOCIAL SCIENCE RESEARCH

Theme

West Asia in Transition
Confrontation, Conciliation and Collaboration

ABSTRACT

The 21st Century world has witnessed many new transformations in different domains of global society, economy and polity. These transformations have largely influenced both policies and politics across continents. Given its geo-strategic location, intricated history and intrinsic polity, West Asia has emerged as an important region reflecting the multifaceted transformations in the socio-economic and cultural domain on the one hand and political dominion on the other.

Great power and regional politics have also greatly influenced the domestic and foreign policy of regional countries thereby profoundly reshaping the region's socio-cultural movements besides reorienting political endeavors towards poverty eradication, anti-terrorism and primordial identity. Moreover, these factors have also contributed to deepening the democratization and, at the same time, strengthening the radicalization in West Asia, resulting both in continuities and changes.

Under the current theme, the DCRC GLOBALENSE invites articles to explore and examine the key theme of 'West Asia in Transition' highlighting the changing trends from confrontation to conciliation and finally to mutual collaboration amongst various regional stakeholders amidst the new global realities.
